SERVING DELTA COUNTY

OCTOBER 2019 | HOPEWESTCO.ORG

GIVING BACK TO OUR COMMUNITY

The Delta HopeWest team hopes to make a positive impact on the well-being of our community through several volunteer efforts throughout the year.

“Our responsibility to our community is more than just providing quality services,” said Dorothy Pew, HopeWest Program Director in Delta. “We believe our responsibility is rooted deeply in our mission and reflected by our determination to play an active role in our community.”

While the volunteer work is not required, the staff feels this service is inspired by their gratitude for the support HopeWest receives in Delta County. The team finds many creative ways to give back including Christmas caroling and serving meals at the soup kitchen.

In September, staff spent a Saturday afternoon getting their hands dirty while participating in the Community Cleanup, an effort of the Love Cedaredge initiative. The cleanup initiative gave those needing a little helping hand to finish small household projects such as rehanging

A note from Christy

October – how can it be? I can honestly say, days flow into weeks into months into years and you stop to wonder, “wasn’t that just yesterday?” when in essence it was last year.

In our HopeWest world, it does feel just that way. We are at an all-time high of 400 employees, 1,300 volunteers and serving nearly 650 hospice and palliative care patients across all our sites every single day. Whew. This plus launching new businesses is enough to make you realize why it is hard to keep track of the days.

Our numbers are made up of many smaller communities who add up to make a significant difference. A special thank you goes out to all our supporters throughout Delta County – employees, volunteers and donors who make an impact every day. We couldn’t do it without you.

Thank you for your continued support and allowing HopeWest stay true to its mission of profoundly changing lives – one family at a time.

When the Delta HopeWest team recently heard about the O - blood shortage at St. Mary’s Hospital, they wanted to help. The St. Mary’s Blood Mobile happened to be in Delta that week, so they sprang into action. Many Delta employees donated blood, some even donated for the first time ever!

“It’s a rewarding feeling to be part of something bigger than yourself.” Said Jenni Neil, HopeWest Office Manager and organizer of the volunteer efforts. “I can’t think of a better way for us to show thanks to our community.”

HopeWest Employees Dave Taylor, Misty Armendariz, Richard Lax, Jenni Neil and Carrie Bauer donate blood to St. Mary’s Hospital.

DOES INSURANCE PAY FOR HOSPICE CARE?

At dinner recently, a friend asked me why HopeWest needs to fundraise. “Doesn’t insurance pay for hospice?” he asked. Like many questions in healthcare today, the answer is complicated.

I explained that hospice reimbursement is a capitated payment. What this means is that regardless of the actual cost of the services provided, hospices receive a set amount for each day a person is in hospice care. Often, the costs of providing patient-centered care are far greater than what Medicare reimburses. And surprisingly, reimbursement rates for HopeWest have not increased in the past 12 years. So, the answer is yes, insurance pays for hospice care, but not nearly enough to cover the cost of care.

To be hospice eligible, patients must have a life expectancy of six months or less and no longer seek curative treatment. Once enrolled in the HopeWest hospice program, a personalized care plan is developed to meet both the patient and family’s unique needs. Service includes skilled nursing, pain and symptom management, physician services, medicines, durable medical equipment (like special beds), therapies to improve the quality of life, social worker services, spiritual services, and grief counseling. In addition to these services, trained HopeWest volunteers are available to provide an extra layer of care and support to the patient and family.

Because terminal illness can strike at any age, not everyone who needs hospice care has Medicare or the equivalent. Thankfully, at HopeWest, no one is ever turned away due to an inability to pay.

It is fundraising that enables HopeWest to provide the best comprehensive care to our patients and their families without being limited to the Medicare reimbursement. So, to get back to my friend’s question, HopeWest needs to fundraise so we can continue to provide the care our community expects and trusts. The kind of care we all want for our loved ones.

HopeWest needs to fundraise so we can continue to provide the care our community expects and trusts. The kind of care we all want for our loved ones.

As I finished explaining why fundraising is so important, he asked me another question. “What would we do if HopeWest wasn’t here?” It isn’t often when I am at a loss for words but I think the prospect of the answer stunned me. I shrugged my shoulders and said, “I’m not sure.”

Donors and businesses have supported HopeWest for 26 years, helping us grow to become an extraordinary organization of 400 employees caring for more than 2,500 families each year. I am always inspired by our community and the generosity shown to friends and neighbors, thank you!

Handling the Holidays

While Grieving

By Melanie McClanahan, Bereavement Coordinator

For people who are grieving, every day can be filled with reminders of their loved ones, emotional roller coasters and an overall feeling of loneliness. Holidays can often impact day-to-day grief much more.

WHAT YOU MAY FEEL:

- Physical/mental exhaustion
- Increased emotions like sadness, anxiety, isolation and frustration
- Difficulty with reminders, such as certain scents, TV programs or music
- Increased pressure with social gatherings

Handling the holidays while grieving is a right everyone should have. People should be able to express themselves during this time, as well as personally attune to their own needs.

YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO:

- Take a “time out”
- Allow for down days
- Engage in different traditions, or keep old traditions the same
- Have a little fun
- Give yourself time for rest, reflection and self-care
- Attend events on your own terms (e.g. driving oneself to a gathering or telling friends that they may cancel last minute)

You also have the right to memorialize your departed loved ones during holidays.

SOME IDEAS TO HONOR YOUR LOVED ONE:

- Light a memorial candle during special meals
- Give a keepsake of your loved one to a family member as a gift
- Make a “memorial table cloth” out of craft paper where family members write memories that remind them of their loved one
- Create a “memorial bowl” where family members can put on slips of paper their memories of their loved one and read aloud and family gatherings

HopeWest's grief support program also provides Handling the Holidays workshops during the holiday season to provide support and guidance.

Contact your HopeWest office at (970) 874-6823 for more information.

MAKING A PERSONAL HOLIDAY PLAN

Even those who are not grieving often allow the frantic hustle and bustle of the season to create more stress. It is especially important for you, having suffered a loss, to slow down and listen carefully to your own needs and limitations. It can be helpful to think ahead about ways to make the holidays easier for yourself. Below are a few thoughts that can help you prepare for the upcoming holiday season.

I predict that the most difficult part of the holiday season for me will be:

The most difficult people to be with might be:

My grief triggers will be:

My support people (those who can hear my grief) are:

This year I want to include the following traditions in my holiday:

It Only Takes a Moment

*It only takes a moment
to reach out to be a friend, but to the one who
needs you the memory never ends.*

*A simple act of kindness to a person you don't know may plant a seed of friendship that for them
will always grow.*

*We sometimes lose perspective of the difference we can make,
when we care more of our giving and care less of what we take.*

*So remember that your actions may help change
a life someday.*

*Always think about the person that you meet
along the way.*

For it only takes a moment to reach out to be a friend, but to the one who needs you the memory never ends.

We Honor Veterans

Veterans Day is Monday, November 11

The We Honor Veterans Committee at HopeWest has been in full swing since 2011. This committee is made up of a group of employees and volunteers with a passion for serving veterans.

The committee is dedicated to recognizing veterans, enhancing education based on veteran's needs, identifying resources and collaborating with our local community.

"We recognize those who served and genuinely appreciate the sacrifices they made for this country. At HopeWest we understand that veterans may have unique needs as they age and we are honored that they come to us for care. Our staff and volunteers are provided with ongoing education to better serve our veteran patients," said Justine Fritzel, RN, Senior Director of Hospice and committee member.

Each veteran patient is recognized with a special, private pinning ceremony. In addition, veterans staying in the Hospice Care Center are honored with handmade blue star quilt wall hangings and an intricate patriotic lap quilt during their stay, handmade by dedicated volunteers.

What an honor it is to serve our veteran patients as they so bravely served our country.

"We appreciated all of you coming in with the quilt and honoring John as a veteran. It meant so much to me and him. I know what John went through in WWII and he carried the scars mentally and physically since he returned home from the war. Thank you all for being so professional and full of grace and letting John die with the dignity he deserved. God Bless All of You."
